PROGRAM
Norwegian Archaeological Review will present articles of special interest to Scandinavian archaeological research, mainly focusing on archaeological methodology and theory. It will concentrate on the European area, but will also welcome discussions based upon results from other parts of the world. The aim is to create a meeting ground for discussions on archaeological problems. Foreign and Norwegian scientists are invited to take part in an active exchange of opinions. The main articles should not exceed 25 printed pages. These articles will be commented upon by specialists, and the comments will be printed as an addition to the article, followed by a reply to the comments by the author.
Norwegian Archaeological Review will also present short articles on important excavations and special artifacts, but these will not be subjects for discussion and should not exceed 5 printed pages.
Preliminary reports on research tasks not scheduled to be terminated within a number of years are welcomed. These reports should be of 5–10 pages in length. Review articles from specially invited archaeologists will be printed with commentaries from the authors of the works in question. These articles should have a maximum length of 3 pages. Comments on articles and discussions in former numbers of Norwegian Archaeological Review will be accepted. Book reviews shall not exceed 2 printed pages.
